Sanitary Science in Montclair.

A sanitary association has been organized in Montclair, the object of which is to procure, dissemmate and popularize information respecting the wants of their rapidly growing town. All matters relating to sanitary culture will be discussed, and the facts as developed brought before the people. The topics to be considered from month to month will embrace the ventilation and heating of dwellings and public rooms, drainage, sewerage, diet, clothing, etc. Regular meetings are to be held on the third Tuesday in each month. Special meetings will be held at the call of the Executive Committee to hear prominent scientists discuss subjects relating to public health. The annual fees are one dollar. The officers elected for the current year are: President, C. H. Johnson, Vice President H. B. Littel, Secretary, Mr. Spalding, Treasurer, D. T. Warren, Executive Committe, J. W. Pinkham, J. J. H. Love, and Frederick H. Harris.

The following article, written by Dr. Pinkham, was recently published in the Christian Union. It contains practical suggestions which it would be well for the township authorities in both these villages to consider. The article is entitled

SOIL DAMPNESS IS A CAUSE OF DISEASE.

There seems no longer to be any doubt that one of our most dreaded and fatal diseases (consumption) is caused by soil-dampness. If a damp soil be not the cause, it is certainly one of the conditions most favorable to the development of pulmonary consumption. Two things have unquestionably been proved in this connection; first, that consumption is most prevalent on damp soils, and secondly, that the removal of this dampness by efficient sub-soil drainage causes a rapid diminution in the death-rate from consumption in localities where this improvement has been made.

Some investigators believe that soil-dampness is the cause of many other diseases. Dr. Bell, in his report on the drainage of Kings county, N. Y., expresses the opinion that not only consumption, but intermittent and remittent fevers, rheumatic affections, neuralgia, croup, quinsy, diptheria, pneumonia, pleurisy, bronchitis, cerebro spinal-meningitis, erysipelas and diarrheal diseases owe their origin in a great measure to this cause.

These considerations indicate the importance of living upon a dry soil, and make it obligatory upon any community whose territory is water-logged either wholly or in part, to drain such territory of its surplus water.

By surplus water is meant that which is not held in the soil by capillary attraction; all that water which would run away from a quantity of earth placed in a barrel with holes in the bottom. Such drainage can be easily accomplished. Unglazed tiling with joints carefully protected, laid at a depth of three or four feet, with proper inclination, and at suitable distances, will drain any soil, however wet, in less than twenty-four hours. To ascertain whether a given locality requires drainage, let an excavation be made to the depth of three feet, and if water is found in it in twenty-four hours after the heaviest rain the locality is unfit for human habitation.

The ill-effects of damp soil are not confined to those immediately living upon it, but extend to a considerable distance; so that every inhabitant, whether his own location be wet or dry, should concern himself in this matter. It is pre-eminently a subject of general interest.

"The evils resulting from a water-logged soil rapidly increase with an increasing population, and at the same time the difficulties of drainage become greatly increased when a place becomes thickly settled. In fact it is almost impossible in many cases, after grades are established, and permanent improvements made, to accomplish, even at great expense, what in the early history of a place could be done with very little."

It is also important that the water falling upon the roofs of houses should be promptly conducted away, and not allowed to saturate the soil around the foundations, and find its way into cellars.

Shade trees should be so disposed about dwellings as not to interfere with the rapid drying of the surface of the ground. Where trees and shrubbery are massed together indiscriminately, and cover large areas, they shut out the sun's rays, and offer such obstacles to the circulation of the air as to render them is many cases a source of unhealthfulness; especially in this the case when they are planted is close proximity to dwellings. Trees should be arranged in groups, with ample spaces between; and shrubs, instead of being planted under the trees, should also be arranged in groups by themselves, and should cover but a small proportion of the grounds.

Could these suggestions be acted on, there is no doubt that in many places the lists of mortality would be greatly decreased. It is evident, however, that the thorough drainage of a place must generally be accomplished as a public measure, and cannot be left to individual enterprise alone.

Laws should be passed rendering it obligatory on local authorities to carry into effect such general measures as will render it possible for every one to drain his land, an l making it illegal to erect dwellings on water-logged territory. A system of thorongh inspection should be instituted in every place, and houses constructed without due regard to sanitary considerations should be advertised as unhealthy.

LITERARY, MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC SOCIETY OF BLOOMFIELD.—THE COTERIE.

An entertainment given last week Wednesday evening, by this Society, at the residence of Mr. M. M. Bradley, on Beach street, did great credit to the persons having the arrangements in charge. The first part of the evening was occupied with a Literary and Musical programme. A Poem composed and read by Mr. Wm. D. Foulke, President of the Society, was, as might have been expected, instructive and entertaining.

A Poem, read from "The Budget," a wide-awake journal published by the Society, contains a picture and an image in almost every line, so exceedingly sweet and plaintive that we cannot resist the inclination to quote it here:

A little bird in the fragrant wood
Flits restless to and fro,
"How cold! How cold!" he plaintive sings,
"The Autumn drear no pleasure brings,
Alas! I shiver so."

Pitying prays a little child,
"Come light upon my arm,
And thou my darling pet shalt be,
Shalt warm thyself at home with me,
Safe from harm! Safe from harm!"

Quickly flies poor birdie down;
Sings, "I'll not say no!
Receive me, then, thou gentle child,
I can but trust thy voice so mild,
Yes! I'll go! I'll go!"

Would'st thou now this birdie see,
And listen to his song?
Look at our cottage window near;
His merry notes there greet thine ear,
Nor cease the whole day long.

The musical portion of the programme may not be criticised. Each performer deserves the gratitude of all who listened to the sweet harmony which voice or piano afforded.

Mrs. Jarley was there with her Wax Figures. She and they were perfection. Her witticisms were many, in fact, her language was such as to prove experience in science, esthetics, and philosophy, while history must not be over-looked. Well done, Mrs. Jarley! we would see more of this at some future day. Success is sure to crown thy advent, wherever thou goest.

So true to life were the waxen statues represented that a person unacquainted with the secret workings of the troupe might easily have been deluded into the belief that real men and real women stood before them. It would be unjust to mention any one figure as holding a superior place to any other, for all were faultless; yet, there was one, "Squallena," possessing such remarkable power as to sing with "liquid notes." Such perfection has never been reached by any other Mrs. Jarley than the original—the Mrs. Jarley who exhibited that evening.

Although the night was disagreeably damp and muddy, a large number of members, and several invited guests, from out of town, were present.

H. DODD, P. M.

A Philadelphia despatch states that two young girls, pupils of the Girls' Normal School, left their homes in that city on Monday to attend school. As they did not return in the afternoon their parents became somewhat anxious about them. Later in the day the father of one of the girls received a note saying that she with her companion had acquired a taste for theatrical life and believed that they could do well at it and be no longer a burden to their parents. They had left the city to seek an engagement. The parents have employed detectives to bring them back. One of them is a daughter of a prominent clergyman and the other the daughter of a retired liquor dealer.

An awful accident occurred at St. Andrew's Church, Duane street, New York, one evening last week. At about half-past eight, while the priest was engaged in performing the Lenten service, the wall of an adjoining building, lately burned, was blown over and fell on the roof of the church, breaking through and creating a great panic. The brick, timbers, etc., buried many in the gallery of the church, and caused such a rush of the audience for egress, that many were crushed. Five persons were killed and many more or less injured.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS.—Three years ago Dr. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States from Germany for the cure of Coughs, severe Colds settled on the breast, Consumption and other diseases of the Throat and Lungs. No medicine ever had such a success 300,000 sample bottles have been distributed every year for three years by Druggists in all parts of the United States, and nearly 1000 letters from Druggists are now on our file, saying that no other preparation in their stores sells as well and gives such excellent satisfaction. All we ask is for you to go to your Druggist, George R. Davis Broad st. opposite the Post Office, and get a sample bottle for 10 cents and try it; regular size 75 cents.

AMERICANS ARE A NATION OF DYSPEPTICS.—We live fast, dissipate and fill early graves. We drink all kinds of alcoholic spirits, and swallow, without mastication, pork grease, and every kind of life-destroying, system clogging, indigestible food. Dr. WALKER'S VEGETABLE VINEGAR BITTERS will remove the evil effects, and the recovered patient, with pure, vitalized electrical blood flowing through his veins will have a clearer head and a cooler judgment, which added to experience, will cause him to abstain in the future.
